Puffer Praises G. O. P. Platform

"The preamble to the Republican campaign platform is a document every qualified voter in America should ponder. It outlines some of the basic reasons why our country needs a change of those who guard our liberties and chart our destiny as a nation," R. C. Puffer of Grayling, Republican candidate for nomination for the Tenth District Congressional post in the August 5 primary election said today.

"Free men everywhere will appreciate the opening statement that men are not born to be ruled, but rather consent to be governed. This is in line with our fundamental philosophy that man is born with certain inherent rights," candidate Puffer stated.

"In recent years we have seen those rights disregarded, even flouted. When government abuses the dignity of the individual, free institutions are in jeopardy. In the face of this situation, America should carefully choose her representatives in Congress. Only men who understand the basic principles upon which a free society rest should be elected. The choice of such men will assure policies based upon democratic principles instead of temporary expediencies. There is little reason for turning out those out now in power unless we replace them with men who are qualified to do a better job," the Grayling Congressional candidate declared.

Every proposal which comes before the Congress should be considered in the light of our basic freedoms. Whether it is domestic or foreign policy, we should consider its relationship and far reaching results," the Republican hopeful concluded.

This was guarded on either side with white tapers in crystal holders. After the bride and groom had cut the first piece of cake, Mrs. Jack Barber served.

The new Mrs. Barber graduated from Shepherd High School in 1951 and was employed at the Bear Archery Company at the time of her marriage. Mr. Barber attended Grayling High School and is employed by the City of Grayling.

The Conservation Department's check up shows more tourists come to our county for the purpose of fishing than for any other cause. Therefore it is necessary to stock our lakes and streams every season. That is the reason our State Fish Hatchery has been operating near Grayling for over thirty years. This hatchery employs about ten men the year around and much in between labor is used. River fishing takes a great deal of skill and many different kinds of artificial flies are used. Many good fishermen are experts in making their own fly hooks.

In this changing world of ours what held good yesterday is worthless today. The one thing that holds good today and always is agriculture. If we are to live, we must eat. ## A Leaf From The Military Book

There is a standard military tactic, used by all armies, called a diversion. Its purpose is to confuse the enemy and make him misjudge the actual state of affairs—in other words, to divert his attention from the true situation.

Something very closely resembling this stratagem is frequently used by government bureaus and officials when the heat is turned on them, and it looks as if some of their policies and actions are about to cause them acute embarrassment.

The Office of Price Stabilization, the bureau which is attempting to run much of the economy by political fiat, has provided several interesting examples of this.

Some time ago OPS went in for a great whoop-de-do about the meat situation. There was much talk of black markets and of dubious dealings all through the meat industry. The usual investigations was ordered. It produced exactly nothing of value. And a good many people think that the main reason for the uproar was to hide the fact that OPS' Alice in Wonderland regulations had thrown the industry into a state of confusion, discouraged producers, and so led inevitably to meat shortages.

Much more recently, OPS worked up a brimming lather over the potato situation. Investigation into alleged potato black markets was ordered on a nationwide basis. What will come of this; if anything, remains to be seen. However, it certainly looks as if OPS is doing its best to divert public attention from the fact the late potato shortage was in considerable part due to OPS' own policies.

Yes, OPS has taken a leaf from the military book and is using diversionary tactics for all they are worth. But it doesn't seem likely that an intelligent public will be fooled for long.

UNBOSSED*Why Republicans Should Nominate
Fred M. Alger for Governor

He is unbossed. Best proof of this is the fact that one-time bosses in control of the party organization, seeking to regain power, are doing their best to defeat him.

He has an outstanding record of economy and administrative efficiency compiled during his three terms as Secretary of State. Records show his department handled a 40 per cent increase in workload, while at the same time reducing personnel by 7 per cent.

He believes the solution of Michigan's fiscal problems lies not in new taxes, but in cutting the cost of government.

He stands the best show of winning next November because he is the best votegetter in the Republican party, as proven by the returns of the 1950 election, in which he polled more votes than any candidate on either ticket.

Michigan Mirror

Halfway between the Republican and Democratic national conventions today, Americans can pause to catch their breaths and take a quick look at November.

They're sure of one thing . . . they'll elect only one president.

But Michigan voters face a more unusual situation on their state ballot. They can approve two amendments to the state constitution, two amendments that are as opposite as the GOP and Dem candidates will be.

That prospect is causing bewilderment in Lansing as the experts study the odd situation. And with most of those experts already wrinkling their foreheads over problems of their personal political campaigns, we may wind up with a lot of Michigan prototypes of the famous Mrs. Prune face of Dick Tracy notoriety.

This is how the unprecedented situation comes about.

There will be two amendments to reapportion the state legislature on the November ballot. Voters can say yes or no to each one. If they say yes to both there will develop the question of which one will be effective.

Obviously both can't be anything more than we can have two presidents in the White House.

If voters say no, then both sides will be unhappy because it will scuttle long-held plans and hopes for overdue realignment of representation in the legislature, something that hasn't been done in the past 26 years despite the tremendous growth and shift of Michigan population in that time.

"When in doubt, vote no." That old political maxim might be followed if the voters get too confused between now and November.

There's plenty of room for confusion. In the first place, reapportionment is hardly the subject for a third grade English theme. It's a complicated question with more side-roads than a Miami Beach subdivision.

Because it's sheer Greek to so many voters, it gives a good chance for the silver-tongue boys to appeal to emotion and prejudices. The phrase-coincers are minting "bright terms and witty sayings." Well fed on oratory coming out of the Chicago convention halls and due to be served even more generous helpings as the campaign progresses, John Q. Citizen is apt to frown up.

Even the names of the sponsoring organizations are enough to make the best informed capitol newsmen pause to unwind his tongue once in a while.

The Committee for Representative Government filed its proposal first.

The Committee for a Balanced Legislature came in with its own just under the deadline.

Both groups are made up of many different segments in the best tradition of politics making strange bedfellows. But in each committee there are dominant groups. They'll lend their names to the proposed amendments and make it a little easier to follow the game without a program. The CIO sparks the Representative Government committee; the Farm Bureau and mutual insurance companies are the dynamo for the Balanced Legislature group.

Briefly, the CIO amendment would set up legislative representation on strictly population basis.

The farm-business amendment would keep the Senate on an area representation basis and divide the House on population lines.

Opponents say the CIO proposal would give Wayne, Oakland and Genesee Counties, with their huge industrial unions, dominance over the whole state.

Anti-farm-business factions contend that the plan gives representation to "beans and cherry trees instead of people."

Just what will happen if both proposals get an affirmative vote is something that can kick up an argument as fast as the assertion that Freddy Hutchinson is a better baseball manager than Red Rolfe.

There has never been a similar case in Michigan history so there is no clear-cut precedent. Attorney General Frank G. Millard officially to wait until he gets to the bridge before crossing it. But unofficially he's looking at the roadmaps—books in his law library—for a rough idea of where the highway might cross the river come November.

Common sense might lead to the assertion that if both amendments do carry the one with the greatest seniority will be in effect. But common sense and the strict letter of the law don't always coincide and every 1 has to be dotted and every 1 crossed before an amendment gets hemstitched onto the Constitution.

As one State House newsmen puts it, "We, the people, will probably have to go to the Supreme Court to tell us what our votes say we intended."

The only bright spot in the whole snafu is the consolation it could have been worse. The AFL and a Detroit teachers organization scrapped their plans to enter amendment proposals of their own.

Had they come into the tournament, we might have wound up with four amendments!

Whether Gov. Williams enjoyed the spirited GOP convention last week as much as he'll enjoy the Democratic powwow next week is problematical.

But its timing couldn't have been any better for him.

Preoccupation of Michigan delegates with the big Chicago fracas took their minds off another golden opportunity to unleash their big caliber guns against the governor . . . the second riot at Jackson Prison.

Actually it didn't begin to compare with the vicious and costly one this Spring. But coming in the dog-days news slump, it would have made black headlines and ideal oratorical black powder if the Ike-Taff hassle hadn't crowded it off the top of page one.

The Gov. can thank the Chicago convention for decoying that one off his political trail.

The rascals are cute but attempting to pick up a cub bear is an easy way to invite trouble. Mother bear usually is not far away, the conservation department notes, probably tearing apart old logs and stumps in her search for grubs and other insects. This time of year the pickings are somewhat thin with berries, nuts and other bear foods not yet available. Observe the claws on this "baby," typical of climbing mammals.

Grayling Fire Department News

Chief Middle LaMotte called the weekly meeting of July 14th to order at 7:30 P. M.

Due to the rain, we had no outside drills.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

In place of our outside drill, Chief LaMotte asked different members of the Department to explain one of the buildings we have gone through down town.

This proved to be quite interesting, as it has been some time ago that we started going through these business places.

There were some little mix ups. But it very quickly came to each fireman how to get in the basement of a certain building or if the lights were, what kind of a heating plant was in that building, where the windows were, and all sort of things like this that would help us in case a fire should start there some time.

We talked for quite some time on this subject, discussing each building we had gone through. It is now fresh in our minds again.

After we had talked this all over, the idea was mentioned that it would be nice if the firemen could have red flashing lights on their cars, so when they were hurrying to a fire the public could tell a fireman's car from some one else's, and would be able to get out of the way.

If anyone in Grayling or any other place would like to donate a few of these flashing lights they would be very much appreciated.

There were 16 members present at this meeting.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:45 P. M.

During the past week the fire department was called out twice. On Friday evening about 6:45 P. M. an oil hot water heater at Rasmussen tourist home exploded, blowing the stove pipe off and filling the house full of smoke. No damage outside of the smoke.

On Sunday afternoon a grass fire out behind the Poor Farm started, and the department was called to put it out.

The next meeting will be held next Monday evening at 7:30 P. M. If any young men over 21 years old would like to join, come up to the fire hall at that time.
